

Keymat Technology
has a new name!
STORM Interface

As from the 1st October 2004 Keymat Technology Ltd and Storm Data Entry Technology (USA) will be presented under a new name;- STORM Interface. This change is intended to reflect the widening recognition of the Storm brand across an increasing number of market and geographic sectors. It will also bring our development, manufacturing and customer service locations together under one international identity.

The change in name does not reflect any change in ownership, structure or management . The change does however represent our belief that a brand should project and promote more than just a range of products. It should also create an expectation of quality in service, innovation and manufacturing performance. It is our intention to reinforce the Storm brand as an internationally recognized symbol of excellence. Your continued support is a key element in achieving that objective.

During the next few weeks we will be updating our 'customer facing' systems to reflect the new name. This may take a little time, so please bear with us as we initiate this important change.

Contact numbers and addresses are unchanged. Old Web site and email addresses will continue to work as will the new addresses as listed below. If you should have any questions regarding this change in name, please do not hesitate to contact your Storm Interface Customer Support Team. Direct dial numbers for customer and vendor contact teams are provided to make communication with Storm Interface as easy as possible.

We look forward to hearing from you.
